Economic Success of Budapest "Harv. Marx."

...
He enlisted in the Economic University of Athens (former ASOEF) and the University of Political Economy of Brussels (now ULB) where he received a joint degree in Economic Theory and Political Economy. He then joined the European Union's DG Economic and Financial Affairs where he worked on various projects related to economic policies in the European Union. His research focus was on the role of the European Union in the context of globalization and the impact of economic policies on competition and innovation. He later became a professor at the University of Athens where he continues to teach and conduct research in the field of economic policy and international trade. His work has been widely cited and has contributed significantly to the understanding of economic policies in the European Union and beyond.
